The COPIUS consortium (www.univie.ac.at/copius) will be offering an e-learning course and a workshop on Mari.

From 11 February to 7 June, the University of Vienna will offer a Meadow Mari e-learning course for beginners. The e-learning course offers an introduction to the modern Meadow Mari standard language (Cyrillic script, phonetics, morphology, syntax). Students will be able to read, understand and translate modern texts with the help of a dictionary, and will acquire the skills of basic communication. During the e-learning course, students will be provided with a learning schedule and will prepare the individual chapters of the textbook autodidactically according to the schedule. Homework assignments will be sent to the teacher on a regular basis. In addition, there will be a video conference every Friday at 14:00 CET (15:00 EET) during which students can ask the teacher for additional explanations and participate in joint revisions. Participation in the video conference is, however, not obligatory to pass.

From 10 to 14 June, the University of Turku will hold a workshop on Hill Mari. The workshop in Turku will focus on the second literary standard of Mari, and contrast Hill Mari with Meadow Mari illustrating the similarities and differences between the two standard languages.

If you are interested in participating in any of these activities (the e-learning course, the work shop, or both), please inform Jeremy Bradley (jeremy.moss.bradley@univie.ac.at) as soon as possible. Please include the following information in your e-mail: name, university, knowledge level of the Cyrillic alphabet, knowledge level of Mari (if any), and if you are interested in participating in both the e-learning course and the workshop. For Hamburg specific questions or more information you can also contact Josefina Budzisch (josefina.budzisch@uni-hamburg.de).
