Course description:
This lecture provides a thorough description of the linguistic properties that characterize Modern English. We will draw particular attention to the following levels of language description: orthography, phonology, morphology, lexicology and syntax. The central questions we will address in this lecture are: what do we need to know about the structure of English in order to teach it and/or work with it on a professional level? The focus throughout the lecture is on Standard British (and American) English.
