

Examenskolloquium

This exam colloquium addresses students about to complete their degree course. If you are thinking about or writing your Bachelor or Master's thesis in the field of English literature and culture (there is a parallel colloquium for American Studies), this class offers you scope to present and test your ideas related to your thesis. These may include questions of approach and method, general outlines, or excerpts from your primary material. You will benefit both from the others' comments on your work and from the discussion of the work of fellow students. Dates for the precise schedule will be settled in the first session.
