Course description: This lecture series accompanies the introductory seminars and introduces you to the study of literary texts. What is literature? And how do we analyse it? The lectures will address and explain basic concepts in the field, and they will present you with tools and terminologies for the analysis of texts. The survey will cover, in particular, methods and concepts for studying the genres of drama, poetry and prose fiction. You will see the methods and terms of analysis applied in examples from British and American literature, and you will be guided to relevant material for further studies. It is the aim of the lectures to enhance the reading skills that you will practice in the seminars and tutorials.
