Description:

This course aims to introduce the important features of American English pronunciation including some theoretical knowledge of phonetics as well as those problems that arise for non-native speakers of English. Each session explores a specific area/feature of pronunciation, emphasizing not only theory but also offering practice of the language at hand. The course also aims to make students familiar with the transcription of spoken language using the International Phonemic Alphabet. Students will be required to actively participate in class as well as complete a compulsory test at the end of the semester.
