Course description:

This non-obligatory course is designed to meet the needs of students at all levels for more practice in both speaking and listening skills in English. A great deal of the content will be set in agreement with students during the first session of the course, but it will certainly include work on developing skills in speaking, presenting and listening in an academic setting. Students will gain more familiarity with common intonation patterns and tonal nuances as well as different English varieties. Conversation topics may be as broadly ranged as the students' academic interests, from literature and linguistics to philosophy, natural sciences, education or politics. Let's have some fun getting more familiar with the English language and each other in lively discussions of 'life, the universe, and everything'!
