

Dear ENGAGE students,

we cordially invite you to participate in the student conference English as an Additional Language that will take place in February 2018.

This conference includes academic talks and posters presented by graduate students, PhD students, and renowned linguists working in the fields of second and third language acquisition, varieties of English, and related areas.

Participation can be two-fold:

(1) ENGAGE students, enrollment before summer term 2017:

You are invited to present a poster or to give a short talk during the conference. There will be a Call for Papers coming within the next months. This is a great opportunity for you to get feedback on your current projects, future term papers, or your MA thesis.

In addition, you have the chance to help organizing the conference which can be a very interesting and useful experience for you. You will not receive official credits for it, but you might nevertheless consider this as an additional qualification which you could add to your CV.

(2) ENGAGE students, enrollment summer term 2017 or later:

You are invited to become organizers of this conference as part of the module ENGAGE-M01b (15 Credits). This is a valuable experience for your future careers because you will acquire new skills that you can add to your CV.

During winter term 2017/2018 you will be planning the conference which is going take place in the ensuing lecture-free period (end of February 2018). You will be guided by Prof. Siemund and his research assistants Richard Bonnie, Kathrin Feindt, Lijun Li, Eliane Lorenz and Sharareh Rahbari.

This conference will be similar in spirit to the conference that was hosted by our institute at the beginning of this year:
