Beginn	15.10.2018

Kursbeschreibung:

How do I analyse a poem? How can I describe a text's narrative strategies? What is literature? How does it relate to the culture which produces it and to that which reads it as literature? How do I approach other cultural texts such as a TV series? – Clearly, no single seminar can hope to give the one definitive answer to any of these questions. What this class is intended to provide, though, is, for one thing, an awareness of the importance of such questions. And it is, most importantly, designed to provide students with a basic methodological equipment – with essential terms and concepts which will enable them to successfully pursue the study of American literature and culture during the following semesters.

In addition to the class itself, students will be required to attend one of the two tutorials which belong to it (times and places will appear on the department homepage). These tutorials will be designed to further pursue student questions on seminar content as well as introducing students to basic academic research and writing strategies.

Teilnahmevoraussetzungen:

- regular attendance of, and active participation in class as well as one of the two tutorials
- handing in two short academic essays (2-3 pages each) during the course of the semester, in time for their respective deadlines

Einführende Literatur:

You will be required to buy the following book:
Tennessee Williams. A Streetcar Named Desire. Ed. Herbert Geisen. Stuttgart: Reclam, 1988.
