Course description

This Kolloquium addresses students in the final phase of their BA or MA degree course. The course aims to tackle problems students may encounter while writing their thesis and preparing for their oral exams. In the course of the semester, students will be able to present and test the main argument of their theses, thus gathering constructive feedback. They will also find support and advice when exploring exam topics. Depending on the participants' wishes, individual sessions may be dedicated to a revision of the history of British literature and culture or to a mock exam. Whatever questions you may have relating to the writing of your thesis or preparing for your exam – they can be raised here.

Course requirements:

Regular attendance and active participation; presenting the outline of your thesis and engaging constructively with the presentations of others.
