Course description:

American narrative literature before 1776 unlike that of the mother country lacks the great literary achievements. We look in vain for an American Richardson, Fielding, Swift, or Sterne. And yet, it was a period in which a great variety of literary forms originated. Best known and most popular were Indian captivity narratives, conversion stories, witchcraft and travel narratives that we will discuss in the seminar.

Literature:

A reader will be compiled and will be available in the Geschäftszimmer in early October.

Requirements:

Regular active attendance, a short oral presentation, a term paper (ca. 10 pages)
