Kursbeschreibung:

This lecture offers a first dive into the history of English literature. Introducing texts, authors, and historical contexts from the premodern to the postmodern period, it is designed as a broad overview that presents students with an initial orientation of the relevant literary currents and landmark works. In particular, it will focus on the interrelation of historical, cultural, and literary developments. Students should be prepared to study an extensive amount of texts inbetween the individual sessions in order to complement our discussions in the lecture hall.

Extracts of the texts discussed will be made available both online and through a seminar file to be distributed during our first meeting. For preparatory reading I recommend Hans-Ulrich Seeber's Englische Literaturgeschichte (Stuttgart: Metzler, 2004). Many of the texts discussed can be found in the two-volume The Norton Anthology of English Literature by M. H. Abrams et al. (New York: Norton, 1993).

This lecture will be held in English.
